ROLL OF HONOR.

Acts of Special Merit Performed During the Year.

It has been the custom for some years to keep a record of acts of special merit of officers of the Police Department, and this record may be styled a roll of honor.

It is a record of acts of bravery or of brains and thought, and may cost more and take longer to compile than a roll of names or of titles or even a life, it is a way—a long one.

This roll of honor for the past year mentions twenty-three of those members of the Department who have distinguished themselves by extraordinary bravery.

The first man mentioned is that of P. Trolman Thomas T. Kennedy, of the West Thirty-seventh street station, who rescued a woman from drowning in the Hudson River on May 10, 1901.

Detective sergeants James F. Valley, and Frank Ryanhoe, of the Central office, received medals for their gallant work in the second floor of a burning building on Pitt-street, near Sixth avenue, on the night of May 1, 1901, when the fire was so severe they were severely injured by the flames.

During the same fire, Sergeant Quarantini, a building supv. Ryman called for volunteers from the force connected with him, and he was the first to enter the burning building for the purpose of patrolling the bay windows in the neighborhood of the quarantini.

Patrolman Samuel Sanger, Nineteenth Precinct, was stabbed by one "Kenny" while attempting to arrest him at the corner of Bleeker street and Carmine street, on the night of Nov. 18, 1907.

Patrolman H. Williams, Nineteenth Precinct, was shot and instantly killed in April, 1902, by "Costello" or "Caddy," a tramp, who was sleeping on a truck standing at the corner of Washington street, near Charles street.

Patrolman John J. O'Brien, Nineteenth Precinct, was shot and killed by a revolver while at his pocket at the corner of Tenth avenue and Fort street by a prisoner whom he was escorting.

Patrolman Peter McIntyre, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, during the riot of April, 1906, was shot and killed by rioters at Forty-second street and Third avenue that he died from his wounds shortly thereafter.

Patrolman Edward Dippie, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, was another victim of the riot of 1903. On the night of May 6, 1903, a few days before the Draft Riot, he received a bullet wound from a gun in the hands of a rioter.

Patrolman John Van Buren, Eighth Precinct, was shot and killed by a rioter on the night of the riot of Feb. 6, 1904, in attempting to stop a rioter from shooting a woman.

Patrolman George Eichenbrooke, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, was shot and killed by a prisoner from Jones Wood, in the neighborhood of Second

"What did you do then?"

"I was sent to the store and examined. I found that the weight of the goods was heavier than that stated on the invoice. The goods were passed, and the valuation of the goods was lost."

"Among those who listened to the testimony were Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, William C. Clegg, Visiting Treasury Agent Tingle, General Appraiser Jewell and Lawyer Edward J. Connelley, who was the legal adviser of J. R. Simon & Co., the importers and several members and employees of the board."

Mr. Corbett said he had given officers to the reporter on the plea that they were to be published in his paper. They were published in the Chicago Tribune.

At this point Lawyer Johnson said that as charges had been made in the press that the goods of J. R. Simon & Co., they requested to be represented by counsel and be permitted to be heard.

Chairman Fairchild replied that he did not wish to complicate matters unnecessarily. He said that before the charges would be recalled, any questions that might suggest themselves would have to be put to him. They could not submit any statement.

"The examination of Assistant Appraiser Corbett, Mr. Macfarlane referred to the four suspicious invoices and the charges before the general Appraiser Hunt, and in this case Alexander Macfarlane, before the board, was sustained rather than his opponent. You see any indication that you would have been able to get the same goods out of the business if you had acquired Mr. Macfarlane."

"Did you show all these invoices Appraiser Cooper?"

"What do you know of the statement made that Mr. Wiswell was a
